This image shows a page from a traditional Chinese calendar, specifically the back of a 'Hougan' (calendar). The page is divided into three vertical columns by two prominent lines. Each column contains a grid of small squares, each containing a character. The characters are arranged in a way that suggests a calendar grid, with columns representing days of the month and rows representing months or years. The top of the page has some larger characters, possibly indicating the year or festival. The overall appearance is aged and slightly worn, with some ink bleed-through visible from the reverse side.
